Improved Cotton Gins. III), subscribers having established a COT-TON GIN MANUFACTORY in the Town of Hamburg, S. C., on the improved system of Mr. Boatwright, beg leave to recommend their Gins to the public. They warrant their Gins to be equal if not superior to those of Mr. Boatwright, on account of an alteration, which, in their opinion, is a decided improvement: that is, instead of blocks of wood on the ribs, they have adopted the plan-of making the ribs of their Gins entirely of steel and iron, which have proved by experience to be preferable. Mr. Boatwright having declined the gin making business in Augusta, Mr. L. B. Conn. who conducted it there for him, being one of the partners in the concern, they will endeavor to give satisfaction to all who may favor them with their

in the United Service Journal, ENTERDEDINARY SECT OF FANATICS IN India. Ever since I have been in India I have hard of a class of Mussulmans, the disciplined a sect or saint, by name Shnikh Rullai, ho, in order to impress the unbelievers the the truth of the Mussulman's faith, in parted to his followers the power again,coing off the head and limbs, scooping out the eye, and in truth, doing with their bodies whatever it pleased them to do; all of which Col. G—————————in company with a ciergyman, a Mr. R———, had seen when the latter grew sick and ran out of the place, declaring it was the power of Satan, which to this day he believes, and the Colonel. that it is done through the power of the art of magig, at which, 1, of course, laughed, & declared that so soon as a man of the regiment (by the name of Shaikh Kureen, one of these Ruffai) should return from furlough, would witness the exhibition.

A large tent was accordingly pitched. and fifte lamps furnished, and plates full of of arsen e, and quantities of a plant of the cactus tribe, filled with a milky juice, a drop of which, if it fall on your skin, blisters it, and a vast quantity of the common glass bangles or bracelets, worn by the women, and daggers and swords, and things like thick steel skewers, and other horrid looking weapon, like a butcher's steel, only with a handle severed with chains, and about 20 Ruffais to beat all manner of drums, and so, when all was ready about five of the offiers left the mess table with myself, and along with us about a hundred sepoys rowded into the tent. When we were sented and silence obtained, the work comnenced by a sort of chant from the sacred books, the drum beaters joining in and keeping time; the chant increased at length harb in joise and velocity, until, having seized hold of the instruments, the body kept in a sort of swinging motion, they plunged the skewer instrument, one through each cheek, another through the tongue, a third brough the throat, and then commenced stabbing themselves with swords and daggers, & all sorts of instruments. Others cut off their tongue, and, having roast d it in the fire, put it in their mouth again, when it immediately united, they eat the arsenic and the blistering milk plant, whilst others munched the glass bangles as thou, hother were the greatest delicacies. This was all done within a half yard of my knees, for this moment I know not what to think of it. I am not superstitious; and although the colonel and numerous most respectable nawere to be in any manner trusted, they had drops of blood would sometimes follow, the instruments, and the performer would receive some slight injury. On taking my departure from the tent, I those powers - Edinburgh Review.

happened to say that I should, at all events, think more honorably of their powers if I saw them exhibit in the open face of day, and divested of noise, motion, paraphernalia, &c. On the following day, while reclining on my couch, at about two o'clock, reading an English newspaper, without a servant or a soul near me, in rushed Kazze, (priest or judge,) his hands full of instruments, which throwing on the ground, he seized one, plunged it through his cheek on the left side, another, on the right, a third, through his tongue upwards, so that it stuck into his nose, another through his throat; he then stabled himself with a bright sharp creese, which entered his body about three inches; not a drop of blood fell. He was going to cut off his tongue, when I begged him to desist. I was, in truth, perfectly nauseated at the sight. The man was in a state of freuzy, and really looked frightful, his face stuck full of instruments, and stabbing and cutting bimself with all his might. I sang out for some people and turned him out

I have now told you what I have seen, I know not myself what to think. There are many persons of very strong minds in although driven out of Christendom, demonology, witchcraft necromancy, and the entire list of black and forbidden arts and powers are abroad and in full existence in India. And I must declare that I will all that I have told you. I examined the instruments; I saw them drawn out of the flesh, and no sea, or blood or mark was left I also saw a man eat and swallow three onnees of arsenie, and crush and swaflow of plunging swords and daggers, cutting off their togge frying it and putting it together though "seeing is believing." I can scarcely though "seeing is believing," I can searcely say that I believe what before a court of justice I would swear I have seen.

ELOQUENCE OF THE EARL OF CHATHAM. -Ail accounts, however, concur in representing the effects of his chaquence to have been prodigious. The spirit and vehemence which animated its greater passaupon, the grandeur of the ideas which he testimony of all his contemporaries, and the are we likely to be misled by those fragments for the more striking passages were forgotten or fabricated. To these mighty attractions was added the imposing, the animating, the commaning power of the countenance singularly expressive; an eye so piereing that hardly any one, could stand its glare; and a manner altogether singularly striking, original, and characteristic, not withstanding a peculiarly defective and even awkward action. Latterly indeed, his infirmities precluded all action; and he is described as standing in the House of Lords, leaning upon his crutch, and speaking for ten minutes together in an undertone of left mixed with flour to destroy rats, was voice scarcely audible but raising his notes saved from death by a free administration, one of his grand bursts of invective or explaces, which promptly relieved the child, clamation. But, in his earlier time, his whole manner is represented as having been beyond conception, animated and imposing. Indeed, the things which he affected by it principally, or at least have made it possible to attempt, almost exceeded belief .-Some of these sallies are, indeed, examples of that approach made to the ludicrous by the sublime, which has been charged opon him as a prevailing fault, and represented under the name of Charlatanerie-a favorite phrise with his adversaries, as in friend in Newark.
